[Redacted]

In due course you will receive official notification that, to our regret, we are unable to find a place for you in the Agency as things stand at present. I am sorry for this, but you know how these things are.

More and more it seems to me, and essentially so, we are tending to recruit people with definite and often rare specialties and, in consequence, the good all-round man sometimes gets pushed off the sidewalk.

Allen Dulles and I will try to keep you in mind, and if anything comes up where you can be slipped into just the right slot, I will get in touch with you again. But even in these times of constant and rapid change, I cannot advise you to be too hopeful of favorable action.

It is hardly needful to add how sorry I am.

Dear Allen,

You certainly had a grand wedding. The parents of the bride were wonderfully gracious and the bride herself lovely beyond compare.

I want to come to Washington to see you if convenient some time after April 30th. I am leaving N.Y. today and will not be back until next Monday. I will therefore telephone you Tues. May 1st, and make a date.

Best regards sincerely yours
